

HUB Charter School Practice Study Hall

September 2020

Whether you are opening the school year in person, completely remote, or within a hybrid model, there is immense pressure on your budget and on your workforce. Below are a few highlights that we hope will help you manage students, employees, and costs associated with both.

Who is liable if kids, teachers, or staff get the virus at school this fall?

As students and staff return for a school year like no other, they will wade into an environment that could risk their health and safety as the coronavirus continues to spread. But should students and staff fall seriously ill, causing them to rack up hospital bills or even die, who will take legal responsibility? Click here to read more.

Five Actions Employers Can Implement to Support Employee Mental Health

These times of change are putting tremendous pressure on the mental wellbeing of all Americans, including your employees. Now is the time for employers to step up with meaningful support. Here's where to start when addressing mental
